THE GAME'S SHADY SIDE

JACK DEMPSEY CONFIRMS THE EVIL REPORTS OF THE FISTIC BUSINESS.

"Eye Witness" Also Divulges the Information That the Champion Was Long on Dependents Who Needed Help Very Much.

This is the seventh of a series of articles by "Eye Witness," a reporter for the Chicago Tribune, who was sent to get the truth on Dempsey.

By Eye Witness.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 21.—One of the curious experiences I have had here is that everything of evil report, everything mean or double-faced or unsportsmanlike that I or anybody else could think of or thought or imagined about the business Jack Dempsey is in has been confirmed with a triple-ply emphasis by the plain words of Jack Dempsey himself.

Nobody could think worse of American pugilism under the conditions at present existing in that line than I myself. The American pugilism thinks of it. He says those conditions are so bad that a change must come before anything else could be for the better. Both in its sporting and its commercial aspects he considers the game sick, and he spoke in a strain that recalled one of Minnie Maddern Fisk's old-time arraignments of the theatrical syndicate. The words he used were not as choice as hers, but they conveyed this meaning with extraordinary force and vigor compared to what he was principally intent upon.

KNOCK FOR THE CROOKS.

"The rough, dirty, tough fighters," he said, "and the lying, cheating, monopoly hunting fight promoters, and fighters' managers—they can and ruin everything. Mean! Why, those promoters give a boy over $10 to go four rounds and then take $10.50 away from him for their share. The managers have those fellows just where they want 'em. I know what I talk. I've heard it. 'You let this fellow win tonight or you don't fight here again.' That's the way they talk.

"And money! Why, the little fellows take what's given 'em, and if they don't like it, all right—out that door and walk back to Reno. Managers and promoters are the cards and the fighter has no chance against a combination like that. Managers and promoters! They don't love the sport, they love money, money is all they're after and all they're thinking over (he didn't say "thinking of") and they're in a fair way to kill the boxing game.

WOMEN AS LURE AT CAMP.

"You outsiders wouldn't believe the things they do—the sending dirty letters, and the trying to kidnap you, and the sending women up to your training camp, and 'the nice little bottle of wine, Mr. Dempsey,' and the women with their 'Oh, we're going out with the cast this evening, Mr. Dempsey, and won't you join us?' and all that stuff that leads just one way, and that's out; and then some folks wonder I ain't crazy about fighting. It makes me sick, that's what it does. Just sick at the stomach.

"I go to do some business with these people, and the first thing it's out with the bottle of whisky, and in fifteen minutes the room is so thick with cigarette smoke I can't breathe. I'd rather be up here playing around the house with the dog, even if she's got her pups on her mind and won't pay any attention to me.

TRICKS OF OUT PROMOTERS.

"And then, when they out pull 'the queer stuff on you in your own game, it's the queer stuff for somebody else's games. Just now it's the oil game. 'You just sign your name here, Mr. Dempsey. It won't be a bit of worry to you.' Oh, yes, and then I'm supposed to be the president of the company and booster for a lot of bum stock. Say, I'd look nice going into that stuff, wouldn't I—and all my friends are people that ain't got much money. You see what they try to get you into.

"But what makes me sickest is when the fakers come around with those good causes—with those things that they tell you it's your duty to come in on. One of 'em was around here yesterday and, jees, he was awful tough and hardboiled about telling me my duty to the boys, and at last I said to him: 'Now, don't think you can put a bum over on me by giving you this $150 because I'm good natured, and don't go away with it thinking it's because I have to.'

GETS SUSPICIOUS OF EVERYONE.

"Mr. Eye, sometimes I get so I don't say two words to anybody, because pretty near everybody gets twisted. There's a lot of people in this world that's narrow minded, and, being narrow minded, makes 'em believe anything on one hearing. That's the way people get prejudiced, and that's the reason I always say to myself that I don't know anybody till I've talked to him.

"I'm not squawking. I'm just telling you. I don't worry about anything. I could do twenty years on one rap. What that savory phrase means I don't know and I didn't want to interrupt the flow by stopping to ask. Willard can't help kill you. That's why I can't afford to worry about Martin and Bronson and Carpentier, all the rest of 'em. It's all simple enough. I dope out the situation this way. If they crowd Dempsey out entirely, then Martin can fight with Carpentier. We'll let 'em play that game if they want to. I'll just give 'em the championship and let 'em have how much good it will do 'em, if they don't fight me for it.

ABOUT THAT SLACKER STUFF.

"As to being a slacker—where do they get that stuff? I had a father who was over 60 when the war came, and my mother's old, too. I had a brother with one of 'em with three children, and I had a brother with a bum heart and another brother who was married and doing. You've been in Salt Lake and you met the family, and I guess you know the situation pretty well and can check me up."

"Yes," I said. "I was there over a week and I think I can tell you that they all said you'd been a good son and a good brother. By the way, I didn't tell you that I saw Aileen and Phyllis, and Phyl bid me to say hello to you for her."

Dempsey grinned at the mention of these two of the "nice kids," he said, adding, "Say, I'm going to send them to the Catholic school next year."

A FEW WORDS ABOUT MAINE.

"I saw your old friend, Hardy Downing and Al Auerbach, too."

"Did you? What did Hardy say about me?"

"What everybody else said—that you'd been good to the folks and that he didn't take Maine's talk seriously."

"Did he said I'd treated her well?"

"Yes."

"Well, I did, and I didn't quit her until I saw things a man couldn't shut his eyes to. You know."

I said, "Hardy seemed fair. He said you'd made mistakes like everybody else."

BEGAN EVEN; QUIT EVEN.

"Yes, I have."

"That that you'd had dependents all right and that, as for going to war, you were a man that wasn't afraid of anything. He said you and he began even and quit even and that he hadn't any ends to serve by talking good or bad about you.

"Al Auerbach said about the same things. He said your folks were up against it awful hard when he first got in touch with you at the house in West Fifth street. Your sister, Mrs. Barrow, is working in Ala beauty parlor now."

"Yes, I know," said Dempsey.

PLENTY OF DEPENDENTS.

What I didn't tell Dempsey, because I didn't wish to seem to rub it in about the dependents, though only about three years and four years ago—was that my friend and neighbor opposite—opposite the Dempsey home in Salt Lake, I mean—told me. He said:

"I don't know Jack Dempsey, but I know a lot about the old days of the family and I don't know what they'd done without him. He's been good to them. A friend of mine that drove a milk wagon says he more than once gave them a bottle of milk or they'd gone without. It's a family that had always been up to pickings and sometimes didn't know where the next meal was coming from until Jack came up in the world."

On the whole, I guess, there's no doubt, Jack had the dependents all right —and plenty of them.

NO MANAGERIAL CHANGE.

As Long as Dempsey Is a Fighter Kearns Will Be His Manager.

By Eye Witness.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 21.—Kearns put me where I am and as long as I am a fighter Kearns will continue to manage me. When I'm through fighting I won't need any manager."

This is the succinct and characteristic message Jack Dempsey has just telephoned from the desert, where he is play acting in one of the episodes of "Dare Devil Jack," and it is the answer of the report emanating from Cincinnati that he and his manager, "Doc" Kearns, have parted and that Welsh has become his manager. Welsh denies by telegraph, saying: "All news to me. No truth in it and I don't want to be implicated in the story in any way."

Kearns is also sending out denials.

BANTAMS FOUGHT A FAST DRAW.

Pal Moore and Earl Purryear Battled 12 Rounds in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Feb. 21.—Pal Moore of Memphis, the conqueror of Jimmy Wilde, and Earl Purryear, formerly of Oklahoma, engaged in a 12-round draw bout last night before the Peerless Athletic Club. From gong to gong they went after each other without a letter. It was the fastest and most scientific exhibition seen here this season.

Referee Tony Geiger's decision met with the approval of a large crowd.

The tall, elusive Moore carried the milling to his antagonist almost all the way, but found the latter almost as clever and just as willing to make a real fight of it. Purryear landed the greater number of wallops, but Purryear kept the battle even by scoring the straighter and harder blows. There were no knock downs.

AN OLYMPIC ATHLETE AT 62.

Dr. Graeme M. Hammond Will Be a Member of Fencing Team.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—An athlete 62 years old will represent the United States in the Olympic games at Antwerp. Furthermore, he is going to start playing golf when he is fourscore, and when he is about 100 he thinks he will begin to grow old.

He is Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, president of the Amateur Fencers' League of America, and former national fencing champion. Dr. Hammond has been there before and knows what to expect. As one of the twelve members of the American fencing team that competed at Stockholm in 1912, he was among the last to be eliminated by the superior European fencers.

ROSED OUT AGGIES BY ONE POINT.

Oklahoma Basketeers in a 28 to 27 Game on Home Floor.

NORMAN, Ok., Feb. 21.—By defeating the Kansas Aggies, 27 to 23, here the University of Oklahoma has made a bid for honors in the Missouri Valley conference, despite five games lost earlier in the season.

The score at the end of the first half stood 18 for Oklahoma and 16 for Kansas. The second half was a desperate battle, with the Sooners showing better form.

MAGILL GOT DECISION OVER MALONE.

The Milwaukee Boy Used Only His Right After the Fifth.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 21.—Art Magill of Oklahoma City was given the newspaper decision over Jack Malone of Appleton in a 10-round no-decision contest here last night. Malone claimed he broke his arm in the fifth round. Thereafter he used his right exclusively. Magill forced the boxing in the first half of the bout, but appeared to favor his opponent after the injury. Both men weighed 154 pounds. Malone suffered a fracture of the same arm several months ago.

CLYMER WILL KEEP TAGGART.

The Outfielder Assured of Position With Columbus Next Season.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 21.—Outfielder Taggart will remain with the Columbus team next season, it was reported here this week that Manager Clymer intended to send Taggart to Louisville in exchange for Bob Hescher but the report is denied here. Taggart signed a contract last week and was promised by Clymer that he would not be placed on the market.

OTTAWA WON IN A PLAY-OFF.

The Baker Five Tied Score Near End of Game, but Lost, 36 to 40.

OTTAWA, Kas., Feb. 21.—In a game featured by a 5-minute play-off, Ottawa university's basket ball team defeated the Baker quintet here last night, 40 to 36. The Baptists led all the way, but near the end of the contest, when Baker rallied and tied the score at 25. In the play-off which followed Ottawa scored five points to Baker's one.

MADE CLEAN SWEEP OF SERIES.

Washburn Defeated Pittsburg Normal for Second Time, 37 to 21.

TOPEKA, Feb. 21. The Washburn college basket ball team defeated the Pittsburg Normal five in the second game of their series, 37 to 21, here last night. Weede's men made a good showing, in view of their severe drubbing Thursday night. This is Washburn's eighth victory out of ten games played.

A DUNDEE-LAWLER DRAW.

But Ringside Experts Gave the Shade to Omaha Boxer.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 21.—The 10-round bout last night between Jack Lawler, Omaha feather weight, and Johnny Dundee, New York lightweight, was called a draw by the referee, but all three sport writers at the ringside stated later Lawler was the better of several rounds. The fight was a fast one, with Lawler doing most of the leading.

I. J. Cammack was quoted as saying last night that the city and league rules of the interscholastic basket ball series might be postponed and that it would rest with H. R. Shepherd whether it would ever be played.

"There is no reason whatever why this should stop the final contest," said Mr. Shepherd. "Every player is in fine physical condition and none of them had the "flu." I am sure it would do them far more harm to stop now than to continue whereas if action on they would be kept in the same good condition. I'm for the last game being played and for it at once."

According to official data received after the game 6,500 persons viewed the struggles last night. Of these 3,153 held season tickets, Central leading with 1093.

Francis Hess is leading the league in goals with twenty-nine, Wetzel is second with twenty-five and Dorough third with twenty-three. Hess and Wetzel played good games last night, the former bagging eight and the latter nine from the field.

Captain "Hobe" Gilmore unloosed one of his weird hooks in the game against Central, but Referee Garfield Weede, deciding it had not gone through, disqualified it. After the game, however, he was persuaded that the goal was legitimate.

Speaking of the Manual captain, it was the first time this season that he displayed the form that won him fame several years ago. He played a cool, heady, clever game last night.

Although they were considerably crestfallen and somewhat set back in the standing by losing to Westport, the Northeasters still have an excellent chance of copping the pennant and none of getting worse than a tie. A victory over Central will laud the title, but another defeat will put the winner of the Westport-Manual game an equal opportunity to share the season's honors.

J. U. Yonkel and C. Central until last year, is an interested spectator at each game and follows the plays closely.
